CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Thursday Dec. 8.

Debate on the Amendment to the Constitution.

I am not disposed, Mr. Speaker, to go at this time, into arguments which have already been advanced, with much force, respecting the influence of this change upon the rights of great and small states. I can add nothing to their weight by a repetition. But I may be permitted again, to call the attention of the house, to the important and singular additions which the Senate have annexed to the discriminating principle.—We sent a resolution to the Senate, in which we declared, that in case no choice should be made by the electors, a President should be chosen from the five persons, highest on the list. The Senate have not adopted this, but sent down to us, the number three. Without attending at this time to verbal criticism, or adverturing to the extreme ambiguity of the sentence which contains the number or numbers of persons, or classes of persons, out of which the house of Representatives are to chuse, in case no election is made by the electors; I will only say, that whether three in that sentence is made to refer to persons, or to classes of persons, highest on the list, it is in either view, the most objectionable number, which the Senate could have selected. I am not disposed to cultivate local feelings, or distinctions arising from geographical situations. But, sir, such is the extent of this country; such it diversity of interests, manners and habits, that parties will rise up hereafter, influenced by such considerations. Look at the United States, and consider what may, and probably will be the great sections of the union, most likely to be united in their views respecting a Chief Magistrate. The eastern states will form one section. The middle another.—The southern a third. And the western a fourth. This last from its great accessions, and rapid increase, will soon be the most influential of the whole. Suppose each of these sections of the union, should set up their candidates for the offices of President and Vice President? From a disunion, no election is made. A choice devolves on the house of Representatives. By this resolution a choice must be made from the candidates presented by three of these sections of the union, to the total exclusion of the fourth; and which that fourth will be, is not difficult to predict. The adoption of this part of the resolution is, on this account, extremely objectionable.

But sir, the Senate have in this resolution proposed to alter the constitution, in another important particular; and have varied, essentially from the resolution, which we sent to them. No less in effect, than to take the choice from us, the immediate Representatives of the people, and assume it to themselves. And we are called upon to submit to this! I speak not now, under the impression of state or any other local feelings, but as the Representative of a free people. In case no choice is made by the electors, the constitution has confided that choice to the Representatives of the people, without even the concurrence of the Senate. By the resolution on your table, we surrender that power wholly, in certain events to the Senate.

Having stated this objection on a former day when that part of the resolution was under discussion, a gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Randolph) in reply to my observations, gave two answers—One, which he considered as conclusive, was, that although the Senate, if this amendment becomes part of the constitution, may elect a Vice President, who may become President of the United States, for four years, yet that this could only happen, upon a failure of the House of Representatives to do their duty, and make a choice. Did the gentleman, before he gave this answer, consider that the provision in this resolution, to which the objection is taken, is predicted wholly on the idea, that the House of Representatives will fail to make a choice; the provision itself supposes that a case will happen, in which no choice will be made by the House of Representatives. It is introduced to guard against the evils which it is supposed may result from such an event; and is wholly idle and nugatory, unless we are to suppose that such a case may happen. Another answer which the gentleman gave to this objection, but which he did not consider as conclusive, as the former, was that in case an election should devolve on the House of Representatives, the vote must be taken by states; and he says, that the Senate are peculiarly the Representatives of the states, and will be as faithful guardians of their rights on such an occasion as the members of this house.

Is this, sir, a reason for our resigning to that body a power which the constitution has confined to us? It is true that the Senate, in performing this high duty, may act as wisely, and with as much circumspection as the representatives would, under the same circumstances.

But let it be recollected that they are chosen for a much longer period than the representatives, and may not feel the same responsibility as they will. Besides the Senate would not vote by states when selecting their President. It is true, that all the states are equally represented, in that body, but it does not follow, that the vote would be taken as in this house, by states. A member from a state may be absent. If present they may disagree in sentiment.—That may happen in this house, it is true, where the representatives from any state shall be equally divided.—But the states here being represented by much greater and generally unequal numbers, it is much less likely to happen. The election therefore in almost all its features, will be essentially changed, if case the amendment should prevail.—And I believe the time has been when the people of this country, would have started at the idea, of conferring on the Senate of the United States the power of giving them, in any event a chief Magistrate.

But gentlemen say, it is desirable to provide for the contingency of choice being mad, either by the electors, or the House of Representatives, that the United States may not be without a Chief Magistrate. Admit it. But why not provide for a new election immediately by electors, and designate some officer of the government to administer in the mean time. This is easily done, and would be much preferable to taking for four years, such President as the Senate may give us.

As therefore I can see no necessity for resigning this power to the Senate, of giving to the United States a President in any event, I shall be constrained to resist this insidious claim of theirs, by my vote against the resolution which they have sent us.

From the Balance.

POLITICAL CATECHISM.

Being a Sketch of what might, on a natural plan, be taught in schools, and also by Heads of Families, to Youth and Children.

WHAT degree of power ought to be entrusted to the State?

It ought to be supreme.

What do you mean by supreme power?

That power which can command the whole force of the citizens, and all their resources.

Why is this necessary?

Because the whole may be wanted for self-defence.

Is not supreme power in a state dangerous?

It is; it may be abused by those who have it; but this is no reason why it should not exist: the power which every man has over his own person is absolute; and this is his own perfection as an agent; and not less so, because he may abuse that power to self destruction: no person can desire to become paralitic for fear he may destroy himself.

Should this power extend to all things?

It should extend to all things which relate to the defence and perfection of the body politic.

Is there not danger of governing too much?

There may be; it is best to leave men, generally, to pursue their own happiness in their own way; provided they do not injure themselves or others; but when they do either, the law should controul them; for the good of the state and that of its members are inseparably connected. After all, there is more danger of governing too little than too much.

Can there never be just cause to complain that government is too energetic?

Never; perfect energy is nothing more than the perfect controul of the public will or the laws; if that will be unjust or tyrannical, the principle, and not the energy, of the government is in fault: if just and good, the more perfect the energy the better.

But is there no room in the best governments for the exercise of mercy?

There is room for pardons, in many cases; if the sentence be too severe, or on doubtful evidence, there is ground for pardoning or remitting it; but this is not mercy but justice: pardons also may be granted where in tumultuous times, offences are greatly multiplied, so as to involve a great part of the community, as sometimes happens; but this is not mercy but policy. They may also be granted where a substitute is offered and accepted; and lastly, where there is evidence of repentance and amendment; provided the crime in these two last cases is mercy.

Does repentance ad for the crime?

It does not; nor is it necessary to answer the end. Where the public permit, the exercise of mercy even divine.

What appears most essential to ing of the State?

The distribution of impartial, and necessary defensive war.

How is justice to be distributed?

By compiling and publishing a set of laws which shall be a common right, and by designating able and men to interpret the laws, and to right be done to the concerned.

Have not the judges power to m in certain cases?

They have not; unless the fixing rules to regulate the practice of where not fixed by statute, is making their province to expand the law made.

Have not the deas of the force of law judicial

What is meant by this?

That their support be ample, and t

Would not the general principles of equity applied by able and upright men, to cases as they arise, answer all the purposes of law?

They would not; the measure of right in such case, would not be common; it would not be fixed; it would not be known—it would be subject to whim, caprice and prejudice; to which all men are more or less liable; decisions would be the opinion of individuals, and not the judgment of the public; the government would be, so far, the government of men, and not of the law, litigation would be endless, and no man secure.

Are not lawyers, as professional men, necessary to assist in the administration of justice?

They are; no state that is governed by principle, can exist without them.

NEW YORK, March 6.

The brig Nancy, a twin Bu ke, from the Delaware. This is the third time the Nancy has been blown out of the Delaware this winter, and the third time of her arrival at this port. On Thursday last, during the gale, being at anchor in the mouth of the Delaware, captain Burke was obliged to cut both cables and put to sea, and was very near going ashore on the Hen and Chickens, a most tremendous sea running at the time, which obliged him to throw overboard 80 bushels of salt. Captain B. came up yesterday to get an anchor and cable. It is supposed the Nancy was put on shore in some easy situation within the Ho. k, as she had no anchors. Captain Burke informs us, that on Thursday last, Cape Henlopen bearing north west 17 miles, in 10 fathoms water, he spake the ship, Semiramis, capt. Smith 108 days from Canton, bound to New York, short of provisions. Captain B. supplied her with some beef. Captain Smith intended if the wind did not favor him, to bear away for Hampton Roads which he has probably done. The brig Ohio, Carson, sailed from Canton two days before captain Smith, for Philadelphia. Captain Smith saw the Ohio again getting under way from St. Helena the day he stopped there. The ship, Washington, Hays, and another ship both for Philadelphia, were to sail from Canton in two or three days after the Semiramis. The Semiramis, belongs to H. R. Pierpont of this city, and captain Smith, and is loaded we are informed with a valuable cargo of China goods.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.

Arrived in town last evening, Mr. J. Wharton, supercargo of the Ohio, capt. Carlson, from Canton, which vessel sailed from thence the 21 Nov. touched at St. Helena the 17th January, and made soundings in 105 days, came in the Capes on Thursday last and rode out the late severe gales in the Bay and got safe to Reedy Is. and yesterday.

FOR SALE.

A TRACT OF LAND
formerly the property of Isham Keith, lying in the county of Frederick, adjoining the merchant mill lately purchased of Nathan Mathew by Henry D. Howe, containing by deed 385 acres, about eight miles from the Court House, and is tho' by good judges, in point of fertility, inferior to no land in the county; it is well watered, abounds in fine low grounds; has on it a tolerable dwelling house, a small orchard, a sufficiency of timber and lays well.

Also, one other Tract, about ten miles above the Court House, containing about 600 acres; lying upon Carter's Run, near the main road leading to Winchester. This land is well watered, has many advantages attached to it; such as country mills, &c.—about one half in woods, and is considered as excellent for crop-ing, being fine for either wheat, corn or tobacco.

Alexandria Daily Advertiser.

FRIDAY, MARCH 9.

A letter received here states, that, the British brig Experiment, which sailed from this port last December, has arrived at Barbadoes, and left there the 27th January, for some other island, that market being glutted. The schooner Harmony, captain Bell, of his port was at Gaudaloupe
the 20th January, to sail in 18 days
—Flour 8 dollars.

A letter from Nassau, (N. P.) dated January 29th received by a commercial house in New-York says, "Every man here, capable of bearing arms, is put in a state of requisition to repel the meditated attack of the fugitive French from St. Domingo. An embargo is laid on all Spanish and British vessels. The noted Captain George Johnson has sent in 14 prize vessels, three of them Americans and several British, recaptured from the French—Pork is 22 dollars per barrel, beef 16 do. corn 12 shillings per bushel, and butter 4s. per pound."

"We have long said that the union of the democratic leaders is a union in which virtue has no part. Witness their infernal ravings against their own Vice President. The man whom they have exalted to the second place in the government is by themselves declared a foundrail and a traitor! A guillotine would not have been too bad three years ago for the federalists who should have dared to hold this language.—
But let us take their own account of the matter
—let us allow in compliance to their own earnest vociferations that their own vice president is a base and detestable villain, and what does it prove—exactly what we have always said, that this republicanism is a mask under which knaves mount into office. If their charges against their vice president be true, let no man have confidence again in the candidates whom the chief jugglers present for his support. If on the other hand they are false, let every honest man withdraw his countenance from those bloodhounds of character. Again if these charges against their own Vice President are true. If in him they have been thus woefully deceived, will they dare to say that in their president himself they have not been cheated? Surely it is not impossible that those who declare themselves deluded in one instance, may be so in another. How then is it that these men have the face to instruct a free people. Men who in the perfection of their own stupid malice are crying their own disgrace through the land; are declating often and aloud that they have been the dupes of Mr. Burr's intrigue. Are these the men to whose sagacity we shall trust? What these dupes of Mr. Burr?
For shame let us not be moved like puppets by the acknowledged, self proclaimed dupes of Aaron Burr.

The next time these keeneyed dragons are doped, the ruin of our liberties may be the first warning we shall have.

COMMUNICATION.

"Good lord! to see the various ways of dressing a calves head!!"

TO THE BEAUX OF NEW-YORK.

Gentlemen,

Being one of those who are friends to style and fashion, I presume, I have a right to oppose any unwarrantable encroachments on the present ton. An attempt is made to introduce again, a custom long since exploded as barbarous for this enlightened age; I mean powdered heads and large queues; a custom established contrary to reason, and which, I am bold to say, has no foundation in nature. Who could have attempted to introduce so quiza-tical a fashion, but some old, would-be beau, who is determined to hide his grey hairs under a load of pomatum and powder?

Can any man of taste compare the beauty and convenience of a brutus crop, to the stiffness and formality of a powdered pate?
and a queue too! of all things in the world the most ungraceful! If men are determined to assimilate themselves to a certain contemptible animal, by wearing this dangling appendage, I shall think, they deserve the stigma long since fixed on the beaux of the old school by impertinent naturalists;

"that they are but one link in the chain of animal creation, above the monkey tribe."

If men of style will wear tails, I think, with my cousin Tim Swith, that they should be sewed in the rear, to the bottom of their spencers.

Should this detestable mode, in spite of all reason, be adopted, it is to be hoped that our belles, as a counterpart, will revive all the horrors of the ancient mode:
the huge unshapen hoop; the formal stays;
the horse shoe roll; and the unsightly cal-lash. Besides, gentlemen, although I like to be in the tippy, I honestly confess, that I wish to be so, at as cheap a rate as possible. In our present mode of crops, what trouble or expence have we? No barber's fees, no disbursements for powder, pomatum, &c. not even the expense of a comb!

Nothing is necessary but to sleep without a night cap, to tumble the hair a little with our fingers, when lo! is produced that beautiful disorder, that regular irregularity, which is the pride and glory of the present ton! For these, and a thousand other reasons, I hope, the enlightened order of beaux, will oppose this attempt to revolutionize the fashionable world.

I have the honor to me, gentlemen, one of You,

BOB CROP.

EXTEMPORE,

On a Review of the Charter TRANSMUTA-
TION Controversy.

The ancient Charter
Our rights d'd barter,
To make it better
They ground its matter
In Federal Mills;
And Demos wicked
Is dast e'en tickled,
And blest'd it, till
Mars reign'd to kill
With leaden pills,
When betis d'd glide
On Mars's file;
'Twas 1, 2, 3
Law clinch'd a fee.
Says Mars to Jaw
Thou'rt a cat's paw,
Thy brain tick, ticks,
Like hen and chicks!
Says Jaw to Mars
The charge is false, Thou'rt got a knock
To quack, quack, quack!
When lo! a knave
Politely gave
Some 4, 5, 6,
Slight blows and kicks;
Mars in a pet'
Did turn the bet;
'Twas 3, 2, 1.
'Twould end in fun,
And sure enough
'Twas all a puff;
The whole is brought
To o, o, o!

Congress of the United States.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Monday, March 5.

Dr. Mitchell from the committee of Commerce and Manufactures, made a report on the seamen of the United States, who in some ports and harbors at home, are excluded in certain cases, although sick, from the benefit of hospital money. The committee have taken an extensive view of a subject, in which the interests of our mariners are deeply concerned.

The house resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of elections on the petition of Andrew Moore respecting the seat held by Thomas Lewis.

Mr. R. Griswold moved a postponement of the further consideration of the report till the 1st Monday in November, that in the mean time opportunity should be given to ascertain facts.

Mr. Dawson opposed the postponement.

Mr. J. Clay also opposed the postponement;
and declared, for reasons assigned by him, that he should vote in favor of the first part of the report, declaring that Thomas Lewis does not appear to be entitled to a seat, and against the second part, declaring Andrew Moore to be entitled to a seat, that a new election might be held.

A debate ensued on the motion to postpone,
which continued the whole day, when the question was taken, and the motion lost. Ayes 36.

The question was then taken by yeas and nays on the first member of the report, viz. That Thomas Lewis, not being duly elected, is not entitled to a seat in this House, and carried in the affirmative. Yeas 68—Nays 39.

The question was then taken by yeas and nays on the remainder of the report, viz. That Andrew Moore, having the greatest number of qualified votes, independent of the bad votes above mentioned, is entitled to a seat in the House;
and likewise carried in the affirmative. Yeas 64—nays 41.

Andrew Moore, therupon appeared, was qualified, and took his seat.

Mr. Nicholson presented a petition from A.
Addison praying leave to erect a bridge over the
the Eastern Branch,

Referred.

Tuesday, March 6.

General Varnum reported a bill supplementary to the militia law of Columbia.

Referred to a committee of the whole to morrow.

Mr. Leib stated that there appeared to be some inaccuracies in the report of the select committee appointed to enquire into the expenditures made for the support of the marine corps. He therefore moved the recommitment of the report for the purpose of correction.

Agreed to.

General Varnum moved a resolution for the appointment of a committee to consider if any,

and what alterations are necessary in the military peace establishment.

Agreed to.

Mrs. Varnum founded this resolution on the expediency of increasing the number of surgeons mates, rendered necessary by the increased garrisons arising out of the possession of Louisiana, and on an opinion entertained of the propriety of substituting malt, in the room of spirituous liquors.

Mr. Thompson, from the committee appointed on the message of the President respecting the state of the public buildings in Washington, made a report, stating the objects on which the sum appropriated the last session was expended,
expressing their opinion that two annual appropriations of fifty thousand dollars ought to be made, and will be sufficient to finish the south wing of the Capitol in a commodious manner, and recommending an immediate appropriation of fifty thousand dollars.

Referred to a committee of the whole.

Mr. Nicholson said he was instructed by the managers in the case of Impeachment of John Pickering to report a statement of their proceedings. He said that as it had been hastily drawn up at his table, it might be, in some respects, incorrect, and might not embrace a full view of all that had occurred; but he believed that it stated all that it was necessary for the house to be p-sessed of.

After stating, in detail, the proceedings of the Managers, the report concludes with the declaration, that the Managers will not feel themselves bound or authorized to appear before the Senate until called upon by them to proceed with the trial, or until directed to appear by the House.

A motion was made by Mr. Smilie approbatory of the conduct of the Managers, on which no decision was made when the house adjourned.—
In the remarks, made on this motion (which shall appear in our next) no disapprobation of the conduct of the Managers was expressed; the only difference of opinion that arose was on the propriety of expressing any opinion whatever in the present instance of the conduct of the Managers.

ELEGANT EDITION

The HOLY BIBLE.

PROPOSALS

For Printing by Subscription, (in four handsome octavo volumes)

THE HOLY BIBLE,

CONTAINING

The Old and New Testaments.

CONDITIONS.

It shall be printed on a saperfine wove paper, with an elegant new type.

The price to subscribers will be Two Dollars per vol. in boards, or Two Dollars and Fifty Cents, handsomely bound and lettered.

To those who subscribe for several copies, a discount will be made, proportioned to the number subscribed for.

The advantage of having this invaluable Book printed on a large type, and, at the same time, in portable and convenient volume, appears so evident, that the encouragement necessary to warrant an undertaking of such magnitude, is confidently expected; a portable volume would often be taken up, in a moment of leisure, when the size of a large unwieldy folio, would operate as an apology for leaving it unopened; in this way, small portions of time would be profitably employed, which might otherwise be totally lost. In large families a Bible in volumes, affording an opportunity for several to read at once, may sometimes be peculiarly convenient: it seems superfluous to add much on this subject.—Suffice it to say, that no reasonable expence or pain, shall be spared, to render this edition of the Holy Scriptures both correct and elegant.

The above work is in press, and will be finished about the end of the present year.

Subscriptions received by R. and J. Gray, King street, where a specimen of the paper and printing may be seen.
